

CHAMPION COLT COMES OF VERY VIRILE LINE

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Long striding Omaha is getting the plaudits of the racing fans everywhere, not only those fortunate enough to be at the "ringside" when he makes his move mows down the best three year olds in the country, but the almost countless others enjoying his clean-cut triumphs over the air or through the columns of the papers. It is just such a colt as Omaha that wins support for the game, lasting support from intelligent men and women that counts more than any other factor in keeping racing on the highest of planes.

Omaha comes of a family noted for sending out stake victors when comparatively young, so it is not surprising that in the first crop of Gallant Fox is a runner of the superlative quality of the conqueror in the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont. "The Fox" was four years old when he begot Omaha, Sir Gallahad III six when the dam of "The Fox" was sent to his court, and so on up to Teddy, Ajax, Flying Fox, Orme and Ormonde. It is worth noting that Orme was of the first crop of Ormonde; it is generally admitted by experts that Ormonde was the greatest horse that ever looked through a bridle.

It is a good idea to double back to a good strain. The mighty Hanover was inbred to Glencoe's son Vandal and it has long been acknowledged how valuable Glencoe blood is, whether on the top side or on the distaff side; even novices are familiar with the inbreeding of Flying Fox. It may be pointed out that Omaha himself has four free generations to Ajax, son of Flying Fox.

A breeder need not despair because his colts and fillies do not begin to win early in their two year old season. It's an old story about Omaha coming to hand extremely late, earning brackets only in one outing in nine starts last year. It takes the "champ" quite a while to get into his racing stride, as was demonstrated when he found the mile of the Withers a bit too short and he had to bow to Rosemont, a colt he defeated by eight lengths or more in the mile and a half of the Belmont.

Omaha is building up a reputation as being a true stayer at a time when knockers in every part of the country are bewailing the over-abundance of sprinters; his advent is indeed timely, if only to partially silence the squawkers. The greatness of the American turf, which includes our own California, with its ideal conditions for breeding, is all in the future; the past is glorious, I'll admit, but not half as resplendent as the days to come are to be.

DALY CITY COUNCIL
PASSES ORDINANCE
REZONING BUSINESSRepresentative of Merchants
Association In Protest
Street Work Delay

The Daly City Council met in regular session at the city hall on Monday evening of this week, with all members present except Mayor Smith, who is absent on an extended vacation trip to the east coast.

The ordinance relating to lands classified as Commercial District No. 1, relating to business and residence zoning, was amended to include certain portions of the recently annexed Colma territory contiguous to School street and Junipero Serra boulevard for commercial purposes.

President F. T. Mather of the Daly City Merchants Association appeared and voiced a strong protest on behalf of the association and other residents and business men over the delay of street and car track work along the newly widened portions of Mission street.

Mr. Mather declared that the business of merchants along the affected roadway had been greatly hampered by the necessary tardiness in completing the work, thereby causing much pecuniary loss to these merchants.

After considerable discussion the city clerk was instructed to communicate with the State Highway Commission, the Market Street Railway and the Union Paving Company with request that the work be speeded up to the highest point possible.

The council adjourned after considering routine business.

OUTWIT STORK IN

Limit To Land Charge
At Institution

The flutter of the stork's wings spurred on a taxi driver to exceed the speed limit on the Alameda boulevard, last Tuesday morning, with his passenger, Mrs. Matthew Breslin of San Diego avenue, Daly City, who was en route to Stanford Hospital.

Realizing that the stork was about to come out victor in the trip to that institution, the woman passenger ordered full speed ahead in a race to reach the Alameda Hospital, where a son, young Matthew William Breslin, was born a short time after arrival there. Later the mother and baby were removed to the Stanford Hospital, where they are both reported to be progressing nicely.

This gives Daly City the honor of claiming as a citizen the first child born under these circumstances at the emergency institution.

CO-OPERATION
PLANNED BY FAIR
AND EXPO HEADSArrangements Being Made
For Purpose of Attracting Tourists To State

Directors of the California State Fair will be guests at a meeting Sunday of the management of the San Diego exposition to discuss plans for uniting the energies of the two attractions in bringing summer visitors to California.

Because the ten day period of the California State Fair, opening in Sacramento on August 31, comes at a high peak of tourist travel, a reciprocal interchange of visitors is planned to have tourists during that time enter or leave the state through one or the other of the two expositions.

The state fair directors will visit San Diego following their annual southern California meeting on Saturday as the guests of Director Fred H. Bixby at his Los Alamitos Ranch near Long Beach.

Secretary-Manager Charles W. Paine completed this week the mailing of over 3000 premium books to prospective exhibitors at the coming state fair. A total of $65,000 in premiums and purses, representing an increase of nearly twenty per cent over 1934, will be distributed to 1935 prize winners.

Copies of the premium book may be secured free by addressing the California State Fair, Sacramento.

ROOSEVELT ADVANCES
TO ATTAIN OBJECTIVEBy J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

Right in line with the highly informative editorials appearing in the Vancouver Sun, remarkably lucid as the discerning admit, Robert Cromie, of the northern paper, asked a pertinent question of President Roosevelt at the press conference in the White House the other day that elicited an answer worthy of the deepest study by every citizen. Interrogated as he was by a Canadian, the sentiment expressed by the chief executive of the United States has more than national significance; the incident shows the close ties binding together the two great nations of the North American continent.

As I have said on more than one occasion the President has a big battle with the backward group of the country on his hands; while he is looking forward with the kind of courage that is often a peculiar result of a truly democratic form of government, his opponents see only good in a past that has gone, never to return. It is notable, too, that President Roosevelt stated we are apparently getting somewhere toward the objective of what is usually called the New Deal.

Being extemporaneous, the talk of the Washington chief may be said to have had even more value than many carefully prepared statements. It is hard to see how anyone, whatever his antecedents may be, can disagree sincerely with such aims as trying to increase the security and the happiness of a larger number of people in all occupations and in all parts of the country, and to give honest business a chance to go ahead and make a reasonable profit, and to give everyone a chance to make a living.

Experts of many shades of opinion are beginning to come to unanimity on one proposition at least: Silver must be brought to the fore more and more in order to restore prosperity of a lasting kind. A. N. Wolverton declares in a comprehensive review of the silver situation appearing in the Vancouver Sun that during all the controversy of the past four years, for and against the inclusion of silver with gold for monetary purposes, far from sufficient emphasis has been credited to the astonishing record of silver as a standard of purchasing power.

George S. Pearson, minister of mines for British Columbia, in summarizing the mining development in the northern province in the first three months of this year, says the two notable features were:

First: The continued activity in search for and exploitation of gold ore resources.

Second: Revival of interest in silver mines and prospects.

After noting that regardless of what is heard from platforms, through the press, and over the radio, the fact remains that gold continues to be what makes the wheels go round, the minister of mines says not so long ago the future of silver was mentioned with a pessimistic shrug. Developing the thought, Minister Pearson points out:

"The picture as to the white metal has very much changed. It is difficult to overstate the importance of this condition. First in silver production among the provinces of the Dominion of Canada, the value placed upon it internationally is a matter of great concern to British Columbia. If the present value holds firm, many smaller operators may be expected to resume mining and development of prospects will be continued."

Wolverton suggests stabilization on an international scale of silver on a basis of 40 to 1, which means 87½ cent silver in relation to $35 gold. He says an important factor against the suggested arbitrary valuation at $1.29 for silver—the statutory coinage standard set by Coinage Acts of both the United States and Canada—is such a standard would eliminate seigniorage profit, a very important source of revenue for all governments. On the other hand, stabilization at 87½ cents leaves a governmental seigniorage of approximately 32 per cent, which the expert holds is plenty but not too much.

The Lesson-Sermon will also include the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The divine Mind that made man maintains His own image and likeness. . . . All that really exists is the divine Mind and its idea, and in this Mind the entire being is found harmonious and eternal. The straight and narrow way is to see and acknowledge this fact, yield to this power, and follow the leadings of truth" (p. 151).

STONEY CREEK CAMPGROUND TO SEE CEREMONIES

New Sequoia-Grant Park Is To Be Opened To Public Inspection This Month

Motorists will be given access to another region of impressive mountain scenery with the dedication and opening of the last remaining link of the Generals Highway, connecting Sequoia and General Grant National Parks, on Sunday, June 23. Ceremonies will be held from 12:45 to 1:30 p. m. at the Stoney Creek campground, about midway on the new road, according to an announcement by Colonel John R. White, superintendent of the two parks.

Skirting lofty peaks of the Sierra and passing through a scenic country dotted with many lakes, the newly completed stretch of highway has an average elevation of 7000 feet. Its length is about thirteen miles. With the sections which traverse the two parks, the total length of the Generals Highway is some forty-eight miles. The new link provides a connection between two famous forest giants, General Sherman Tree in Sequoia Park, and General Grant Tree, "The Nation's Christmas Tree," in General Grant Park.

Work on the new road has been in progress for the past three years, the Bureau of Public Roads constructing the highway for the National Park Service. Heavy problems of construction were encountered, owing to the mountainous character of the country, and the seasons available for work were short, no work at all being possible during most of the winter months. Development of the entire Generals Highway, which lies principally in Sequoia Park, was begun in 1921 and the cost, including the new unit, has been about $2,370,000.

With the final unit of the highway completed motorists driving to General Grant Park will now be able to continue on to Sequoia Park without retracing their route. It will mean that motorists en route to Los Angeles from northern points via the San Joaquin Valley can make a side trip including both parks in a continuous drive. Driving from Fresno to General Grant Park they will be able to proceed thence directly to Sequoia Park and out by way of Visalia, all in a day's easy travel.

DALY CITY ROD AND GUN CLUB DOINGS

On Friday of last week a memorable meeting of the Daly City Rod and Gun Club was held. The occasion was the presentation of the beautiful gold pen used by Governor Merriam to sign the "Striped Bass Bill," which closed all waters of the bay, Sacramento river and San Joaquin river and all waters adjoining to the taking of striped bass for commercial purposes. The recipient was none other than Mr. Howard Vernon, the father of the bill. Mr. Vernon has fought valiantly for twenty years for passage of such a measure, and sportsmen of California owe him a lasting debt of gratitude. Mr. Vernon was made an honorary member of our club in part appreciation. Our club feels honored in having such a sterling man and sportsman in its ranks. The presentation was made by Mr. Joe Springer, chairman of the Pacific Rod and Gun Club, with a touching reference to Mr. Vernon's gift to California Sportsmen. A fitting tribute was also given by our president, A. J. Bodien.

Then followed several reels of wild game movies by Secretary Kost, which were received with much enthusiasm.

Considerable discussion was caused over a motion picture made to limit our club to 100 members; but this was tabled for a future meeting.

All those intending to join the club should do so now.

A rifle team has been formed and is led by Mr. Ed Moore, a high ranking rifleman, while the angling subject is handled by any number of old timers in the game. So get in your application and visit with us on Friday night, July 5. Watch the Daly City Record for club news.

George Wheeler landed a nice eighteen pound bass at Nuny Pier Saturday of last week, which makes him a contender for a club prize for June.

SEE for yourself THE RIGHT AND WRONG OF LAMPS AND LIGHT!

RIGHT . . . At a distance of 1 1/2 feet from this lamp a minimum of 20 units of light are produced. This quantity of light scientists say is needed for reading fine print.

WRONG . . . A decorative lamp of low height and narrow shade. At a distance of 1 1/2 feet—the correct seeing distance—only a few units of light are produced. Such a lamp causes eyestrain.

Without cost to you a P. G. & E. sales-service representative will gladly check your home lighting with a Sight Meter

NOW you can have a lamp designed for eye comfort as well as ornamental and decorative beauty. It is the lamp designed by the Illuminating Engineering Society to meet the need of Better Light for Better Sight. Due to remarkable improvements in design, this lamp is unlike the many ordinary lamps you may now have in your home or have seen for sale on the bargain counters.

Here are four good reasons why these radically different lamps give you more light for your money and protect the eyesight of every child, youth or adult who uses them for reading, study or sewing.

It gives several times as much light as the ordinary lamp because the shade is wide at the bottom and open at the top and gives light a chance to spread over a wider area.

It gives soft, diffused light without glare because its inside opal glass diffuser and reflector.

It gives light from correct height because the stand is high enough to allow light to spread where you need it.

It gives beauty and decoration because more symmetrical proportions between shade and standard are possible.

Protect your eyes and the eyes of your family with one of these new lamps. They are made in either floor or table models. Prices are very moderate and within the range everyone.

HAMMOND WAS GREAT FRIEND OF SILVER COINAGE

Autobiography Of Famous Engineer Stirrs Memories Of Former Years

Says Sidney Norman in a recent issue of the Vancouver Sun:

With the compliments and best wishes of the author."

Those autographed words on the leaves of the two volumes of the "Autobiography of John Hays Hammond," pleased the writer more than anything he has received in many a year.

Published on the eightieth anniversary of his birth, the volumes cover the most stirring mining times this world has witnessed and the story is told with gripping effect. No old-timer should miss it.

The writer has gone part way along its pages and has found it the best history of mining ever written, so far as the past half-century is concerned, and that covers about everything in which you and I are interested.

A confidant of presidents, of Cecil Rhodes and Barney Barnato, sentenced to death after the Jamieson raid in the Transvaal in the middle nineties, Mr. Hammond has had the most brilliant career of any mining engineer of his time, or any other for that matter.

A native son of the Golden West, born in 1855, when dear old San Francisco was in her swaddling clothes, Mr. Hammond—to his intimates always "Jack"—has poked around in many out-of-the-way places in this old world of ours and crammed more romance into his years than any man living.

While the writer was cutting his eye teeth on the hard formation of the Selkirk Mountains, via the Sloan route, Mr. Hammond, nearing 40, had already risen to the topmost rung of the engineering ladder.

As a youngster I looked up to him as the embodiment of everything desirable in his profession.

Early in the nineties he became president of the great Bunker Hill and Sullivan mine, at Wardner, Idaho, and occupied that position during the labor riots of a memorable strike, when the Frisco mill was blown up with dynamite sent through the penstock.

He it was who organized the train-load of strike-breakers, rushed in at express speed over the crazy railroad from Tekoa, armed to the teeth, and who eventually broke up the strike.

In those days "Jack" Hammond was a frequent visitor in Spokane, and many a time have I seen him with his foot on a brass rail at the Hotel Spokane, then and for many years later the real mining centre of all the Northwest.

Of the finest United States stock, member of a family that took a leading part in the Indian wars of the West, Mr. Hammond is a true democrat, welcome wherever mining men congregate, equally at home in the cabin of the prospector or the palace of the millionaire.

Years later, in 1909, after he had escaped the death sentence of Oom Paul, I had the privilege of arranging a luncheon for him at the Sierra Madre Club, in Los Angeles, the only social mining and oil men's club in the West, which I had organized that year.

Looking back over the files of the Los Angeles Mining Review, which I then owned and edited, I find much of interest in the account of that meeting, attended, as it was, by the leading official and business dignitaries of the city.

At the table of honor was another fine engineer—the late Col. Seeley W. Mudd—a worthy companion to the guest of honor. At that time Mr. Hammond was president of the Rocky Mountain Club of New York, the rendezvous of mining visitors to the city for many years, in fact until after war times.

In responding to a toast in his honor, Mr. Hammond said that in his opinion the time had come when the nation should lend its services towards the establishment of silver prices upon a stable basis.

He pointed out that in such a way the nation's commerce with Asia could be largely extended and predicted that failure to do so would force Asiatic nations to become manufacturers, and that with cheap labor and cheap raw materials many of the products then supplied by the United States would be manufactured at such a price that the nation would be unable to compete.

Prophetic words, as witness the tremendous growth of Japan as a manufacturer in competition with this continent!

Trying as I am to keep up with mining developments of this great mineralized province, it is difficult to find time for serious, concentrated reading, but I have far greater difficulty in withdrawing my nose from Mr. Hammond's story when I do get a chance.

I have followed him from the early days by the Golden Gate, accompanied him in his boyhood wanderings in the Bret Harte and Yosemite country; visited his first mine—Hite's Cove and hopped the continent with him to Hopkin's Grammar School at New Haven, and then to Yale.

Have crossed the ocean with him to Freiberg, and then come all the way back to that most beautiful mining country in the world—Grass Valley, California, and its Original Empire and North Star mines, now operated by Newmont Mining Corporation.

It was here that lode mining started in California, and the mines are still going strong, having reached a vertical depth of 4,500 feet through an incline shaft on a 40 degree slope, 9,000 feet long.

Still dogging his footsteps through the pages, I have again visited Casa Grande, Tombstone, Globe, Tucson and other mining camps in Arizona and Bodie, that tough spot of early California, where Mr. Hammond says the town had eight men for breakfast the first week he was there.

Of Bodie, he tells this story. A little girl of Truckee was to leave for Bodie with her parents and ejaculated "Good-by, God, I'm going to Bodie," according to the Truckee paper.

Nothing abashed, the Bodie paper said that there had been a serious mistake in punctuation; what the little girl really said was: "Good, by God, I'm going to Bodie!"

And then he repeats Dan Bland's lines:

The ghost town's empty windows stare like wistful eyes

Down streets where nothing moves save memories and the wind.

When midnight comes to Sawdust corner, eerie cries

Ring out, recalling nights when rowdy sins were sinned,

Bearded miners, seeking laughter and bright lights,

As well as liquor, flung gold nuggets on the bars

For brief forgetfulness of lonely mountain nights,

Their cries are only hoot owls mocking at the stars.

SOME ARMY!

Between June 20, 1784, and August 13, 1784, the armed forces of the United States were reduced to 80 men!

SOME QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Some Little Known Matters That Should Prove of General Interest

(By Maude Larue Ives)

Question: How large is the Isthmus of Panama?

Answer: The Isthmus of Panama is not large. The neck of an hour glass is not so narrow in comparison with the globes above and below it as this little neck of land with the continents of North and South America, which it joins. If the land were level, we could walk across its narrowest part in a day.

Question: Why was the making of the Panama Canal such a gigantic undertaking?

Answer: A mountain of rocks, some five hundred feet high, had to be cut through. The floods of the Chagres river had to be controlled, and, in short, the undertaking was so great that the engineers and employees spent all the company's money before one-third of the work had been completed. The second company worked for awhile, then, becoming discouraged, sold its work and the rights it had bought to build a canal and the control of certain territory to the United States government. This was in 1904. The canal was practically completed in 1913. It was cut through the Culebra Pass and is forty miles wide.

Question: Why are the telegraph poles on the Isthmus made of iron?

Answer: Because of the ants, some of which eat wood. These ants travel in armies, and they will consume a pine telegraph pole in a night.

Question: Why is the bite of the little insect called Chigoe dangerous to inhabitants of the Isthmus?

Answer: This insect attacks the bare toes just under the nail. When it bites you it will not hurt more than the prick of a needle, and the bite makes only a small red spot on the toe, but as this insect bites it lays its eggs in the little hole made in the flesh, and, if they are not soon dug out with a needle, they will hatch into worms, causing great pain and probably the loss of the toe.

Question: What reptile on the Isthmus is good to eat?

Answer: The Iguana lizard, the flesh of which is as tender as a spring chicken. It is from three to six feet in length, and its eggs are the size of marbles. The eggs are yellow and shriveled, but by no means unpalatable. These lizards are sold in the Panama markets.

FLAGS AND THEIR HISTORY AND USE

Are Tokens To Distinguish Nations, Families, Tribes From Early Times

(By Maude Larue Ives)

In the flag of every country is woven the story of the nation's development—the bravery of its sons and daughters when their land was menaced; the tears, the prayers, the hopes, the fears of all men and women who see in their flag security for their children and the promise of tranquility.

The name "flag" has an interesting origin. It comes from the Anglo-Saxon "flegan," meaning to float or fly in the wind, and has the same meaning in English, Swedish, Danish, German and Dutch. Flags are thought of primarily as the symbol of nations, but they also serve as distinguishing marks of armies and fleets, departments and parties, and as personal standards of rulers and other officials.

The flag as it is known today is the result of many centuries of development. In the dawn of civilization man felt the need of some token that would distinguish family from family, and tribe from tribe.

The earliest national symbols were figures worked in metal, wood or stone, borne at the top of a pole or spear. Egyptians, Persians, Hebrews, Assyrians and Romans carried standards of this nature in battle. The Emperor Constantine had an imperial standard made of purple silk, richly embroidered with gold. This usually hung from a horizontal crossbar, but at a later period it was sometimes attached to the end of a staff, constituting a flying flag.

To strike the flag is to haul it down, indicating surrender; to dip it is to lower it slightly and then to run it up again, a form of salute. If the flag floats half way up the pole, it is said to be at halfmast. A flag reversed, or upside down, indicates dis-treas; a white flag, often called the flag of truce, is used as a token of surrender, or as a sign that one of the combatants wishes to communicate with the other. A yellow flag waving over a hospital, vessel or fort means that there is a contagious disease within and that the place is in a state of quarantine. Red is the color associated with anarchy or mutiny. Black banners are usually associated with piracy and warfare where no quarter is given or expected.

We, as citizens of the United States, are its flag makers. The following is from an oration by the late Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior in 1914, which reads in part:

"Yesterday the Congress spoke a word which will pen the door of Alaska; but a mother in Michigan worked from sunrise until far into the night to give her boy an education. She, too, is making the flag."

"Yesterday we made a new law to prevent financial panics and yesterday, maybe, a school teacher in Ohio taught his first letters to a boy who will one day write a song that will give cheer to the millions of our race. We are all making the flag."

"Hats off! Along the street there comes
A blare of bugles, a ruffle of drums;
And loyal hearts are beating high;
Hats off! The flag is passing by."

—Henry Holcombe Bennett.

FATHERS DAY IS TO BE CELEBRATED

Father's Day will be observed on Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service in Grace Presbyterian Church. Rev. John R. Stevenson will occupy the pulpit on his return from Portland, where he attended a conference of Fundamentalist Churches.

"Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee," is the exhortation of the Bible. Let us honor the memories of our parents by worshipping in the House of the Lord. In the evening the pastor will preach a Gospel sermon on "Salvation or Religion, what do you have?" The evening service is observed at 7:45 o'clock.

CHAMPIONSHIP OF LEAGUE IS WON BY DALY CITY TEAM

Peninsula League First Half Closed Sunday — Home Club Garners Honors

(By Al Gould)

One of the most bitterly fought contests played on the local high school diamond between the Daly City Tanforan nine and the Bear Photo team, for the championship of the Peninsula League, first half series, was witnessed by over five hundred enthusiastic, howling and excited fans last Sunday afternoon.

As usual, Matty Sullivan, the home team pitching ace, was the master of the situation, and set the visitors down with five scattered hits and two runs. His team-mates came through with eleven safe bingles and four runs which was one more run than Matty needed to give him his ninth victory to one defeat. Not a bad record for this old-timer; eh, what?

Hatley, the visiting team's twirler, was at his best, and with any opposition but the very best pitted against him might have been the victor. All in all, the Bear Photo nine furnished the high quality of opposition needed to aid the game. The play by play report will show the excellent baseball enjoyed by the fans.

THIRD INNING

Daly City—Albrecht out, Hatley to Corneil. Kondeff singled through short, Sullivan singled between short and second, Kirby at bat. A double-steal put Kondeff on third and Sullivan on second. Kirby grounded to Farrel, Kondeff being trapped between third and home, going out from Farrel to Navarette. Sullivan took third and Kirby second on the play. Carrasco singled to right, scoring Sullivan and Kirby, but was out at second when trying to stretch the hit, Angdo to Flynn. Three hits, two runs, no errors.

Bear Photo—Ortega fanned. Deas fouled to Dinneen, who made a brilliant catch behind the first base dug-out. Petropolis singled to left. Flynn out, Sullivan to Dinneen. One hit, no runs, no errors.

Again we commend umpires Vellou and Burns, members of the Umpires Association, for the able manner in which they officiated in this championship game.

We also wish to extend our sincere appreciation and thanks to all our loyal fans and boosters, for their cooperation and support, both financially and morally during this first half series.

BOILING POINT VARIES

When motorists venture into high altitudes during warm weather they should watch the engine thermometer and make allowance for the fact that the boiling point of water in radiators will become lower as height above sea level increases.

The difference is due to lower atmospheric pressure at higher altitudes. At sea level the boiling point is 212 degrees Fahrenheit, whereas at an elevation of 14,000 feet, such as the summit of Pike's Peak, the boiling point is 185 degrees.

CHAPTER I

"Listen," his father said to Hal Ireland downtown—in the large office off the bank that was all soft carpets, soft lights, soft paneling, and enough floor-space rental to keep five families in comfort for a year; "listen."

"I've been listening, sir," said Hal, "for twenty minutes."

The Old Man seemed to wait a little for the slow draining of humor from Hal's alert, gray eyes. Then he said in quiet irony:

"I dare say you've been told about your charm—"

"Never by you, sir," said Hal with a faint bow, checked gently for fear of starting the slow, heavy throb in his head again.

"I dare say you've been told that when you bow that way, and let your eyes twinkle, you're apt to get your way. But I venture to point out what I can't convince myself you've learned for yourself: that the business world is not made up of pretty girls or susceptible matrons—social or theatrical; that the business of the country, about which you know nothing, is carried on by men who think more of persistence and application than they do of capacity to hold whiskey, or acquaintance with speakeasy proprietors or hand-caps at golf or the fit of white flannels.

"The San Francisco job is open till the first of the month—because they need somebody, not because I've asked them to let you coast in on my name. You've got your last penny from me—for transportation or anything else—till next quarter's allowance. If you want the job, get yourself out there. If you don't, don't."

Hal's quick, mobile face was set, and he met his father's steady look with bright, impersonal steadiness, rather as if he had a peevish, disappointing child before him. Then he got up and straightened his good shoulders with a deep breath.

"That all?" he said.

"That's all," said the Old Man, briskly casual.

"Right," said Hal, with a practiced clipping of the word. "Well—bye." He swung his back on his father and walked over the thick carpet to the door. In the silence, he could feel his father expecting him to turn there for another word—of hope, or of opening. So he pulled the door, caught the other knob behind him, and stepped out, leaving only the soft, efficient click of the latch for comment.

Dairymple—known downtown as Frederick Ireland's knife and fork—was waiting unoptimistically outside, where he couldn't be seen from the banking floor. "Bad?" he asked apprehensively.

"Bad," said Hal, letting his gray eyes light again with their welcoming humor. "Rage-making. D'you know anything about bromo-seltzer? Does it really work?"

"They say so, but I've never needed—"

"And I'm never going to again—never, never—probably. How do you get to California on six dollars?"

"Lord, Mister Hal," said Dairymple, "is six dollars all you've—out of the, that cheque?"

"Fraid so," Hal reached into an inside pocket and brought out the zig-zag length of the railroad ticket, with a couple of pullman slips pinned to the top. Dairymple looked relieved.

"Oh, but you've got transportation," he said.

"On a train that's now probably simply whooshing through northern Ohio. Here, take 'em, and if you can get an adjustment, credit the Old Man's account, with my compliments."

"If I could—if you'll let me—"

Hal smiled, and his eyes wrinkled in the corners. "You're a h—l of a nice guy, Dimples," he said, "but I'm so mad—so mad, for the first time in my life, that I wouldn't borrow a Confederate nickel from anybody who paid taxes in the same state with that—that—with my father. He told me—if you'll believe it, Dimples: he told me I knew nothing about money or life or this country or him or myself or modern plumbing or brokers' loans or God-knows-whatnot—that's of the most quivering importance to a young man's career. He even made me the simply astounding revelation that I was an only child. Had you heard that, Dimples? He sat there and told me—but what the h—l: you're busy. And I've got to get to the Coast. Bromo-seltzer couldn't make it any worse, could it?"

Dairymple looked worried, confused, pathetic, and he murmured: "No, no," helplessly. So Hal patted his arm, promised to let him know what happened, and started uptown again.

It was in the subway that he remembered the sign they had laughed at last night. In the West Forties, it was, and if he could remember from which place they had been going to which other place, he would remember the street. "California... $33" was the line he recalled, among a list of fares to Chicago, Miami, Detroit, Pittsburgh, and other destinations which he had no faintest desire to reach. "There," Tony had said, grabbing at him; "go out to the Coast that way, boy. Rub elbows with the people: see life; know your native land."

the curly ugly silver dressing-table set his father had given him. He'd get to the Coast on fifty dollars and tell his father what to do with any insufferable future fight-talks that occurred to him.

CHAPTER II

Tuesday

Hal's headache was gone next morning, but so—nearly—was the warning sense of triumph in his inspiration. And that went entirely at nine o'clock when he walked into the bare, dingy, and crowded garage office from which decrepit cars of share-expense travelers were dispatched about the country. He hadn't stopped to think what the mechanics of the thing might be; but here the possibilities of dreariness seemed promptly infinite. Eight July days of four hundred miles' driving each, through country reputed to be hotter than, outside, Forty-eighth street already promised to be; crowded into an unwashed derelict of a fine car among a selection from this assembly of desolate, if not actively objectionable looking people. . . . The first rough cartoon of these vistas nearly had him back on the street again—to telephone Dairymple for the easy loan that would put him on this afternoon's Century.

A decent looking man in a clean shirt looked at him across the shabby desk firmly. The telephone rang. "Yes. This is Larsen," said the man, frowning. "Call me later. I'm very busy."

"How Far You Going?" Larsen Asked Her.

Hal upended his old suitcase against the wall near the door and sat on it. Larsen started pawing over the piles of little slips before him. "Now—" he said twice, almost looking up, but each time thinking better of it. Then suddenly, "You can't take that dog," Hal looked around for the dog, then up quickly to examine who it should be in this place with so smartly bred a fox-terrier.

"I've got to take the dog," said the girl in soft, almost-busky gravity. "He'll sit in my lap; he'll be no trouble." Pretty, quite pretty, Hal saw; perhaps a little tough, surely self-conscious—the even solemnity in her large eyes aware that unauthorized people were looking at her, might any minute speak to her and have to be rebuffed. But pretty, really quite pretty.

"How far you going?" Larsen asked her.

"Los Angeles," said the girl steadily.

"Oh," said Larsen, as if Los Angeles were just this side of New Rochelle. "If you keep him in your lap, all right." He turned to the man whose crossed legs Hal could see beyond her. "Does he bite?"

"I don't know," said a lazy, careless voice.

Larsen was startled. "You two're together," he said.

"No," said the man.

Larsen looked at her: she made a slight negative motion with her head and dropped her eyes to the dog. Larsen fumbled through the slips of paper, stopping to frown at one. "You're going to L. A.," he said to the girl. "Yes," she said, barely looking up to him for an instant. "And so are you," Larsen said to the man. "Yes, but I'm not with her." "Then who is?" said Larsen. Hal let half a smile come through his moodiness as he shook his head. And Larsen was saved from further astonishment by his telephone, into which he said again he was very busy, loading three seven-passenger cars for Chi and the West.

Hal's eyes kept coming back to the girl. She seemed not to hear what was going on in the room—stayed quietly, solemnly sure that some one would speak to her. Periodically that annoyed Hal and he looked away. Then he would find himself looking at her again, seeing how the smooth, slight dip of her cheeks under high cheek-bones seemed to be pursing her lips a little, adding solemnity to her wide, possessed mouth.

"Hello, hello," said Larsen impatiently into the telephone; "I'm very busy. I'm loading seven three-passenger cars for Chi and the West." Larsen was sweating. He called suddenly over his shoulder, as if taking a desperate remedy, "De Soto!" A small, cheerful, soft-eyed man, without a hat and looking as if he had just crawled from under a car, came in expectantly. "Take her bags," said Larsen, pointing his pencil at a woman, "and take her to Dallas." The lady's shocked disapproval of little De Soto lost some of its imperiousness when he grinned at her eagerly and said: "Like a fast ride, lady?" She glared down, her pince-nez quivering. "Hope y'do, 'cause anybody rides with me gets a fast one."

"Now," said Larsen more happily, as if their disappearance made it a family party again. But the telephone rang, and Larsen began his weary piece about Chi and the West almost before he had lifted the receiver. "Now, that dog—" he started again, and Hal saw a sort of quick pride take the girl's face as she raised her head. "No, that's right," Larsen added. "We settled that. We settled about the dog. Now Los Angeles—everybody going to Los Angeles goes with Jake Miller. Miller!" he shouted at the garage door. "Where's Miller?"

After an hour Hal went across the baking street for a glass of ginger ale. When he came back the slight, tidy man smoking beside the doorway gave him a lazy smile and in a voice that was oddly unsure of pitch said, "Goin' to L. A.?"

"Guess so," said Hal, trying to be neither discourteous nor encouraging. The trip was going to be bad enough without entering into relations with anybody.

"So'm I," said the man. "My name's Crack—Mart'n Crack." His eyes seemed dreamily looking for the effect of this on Hal.

Hal leaned against the wall, facing the street, and lighted a cigarette. I'm d—d if I'll offer him my name, Hal said to himself; if he's interested, he heard it in there.

"You any relation to Frederick Ireland—the big shot downtown?"

Hal looked at him with cool amusement in his gray eyes. "Sure," he said. "Couldn't be closer." Crack gave a slight, polite laugh. From his side pocket he drew a bright, new golf ball, dropped it to the pavement where it clicked smartly and leaped up to his waiting hand again.

HOW OUR HOME TEAM IS PLAYING

(By Al Gould)

To substantiate the statements that have been made in these columns concerning our home team by the writer, the time and opportunity has arrived where by facts and figures shown everything concerning the club said through these columns has been achieved in far greater proportion than forecasted.

It was predicted that the Daly City Tanforan baseball team, ably managed by "Jeff" Martin, would reach the high peak obtained. While "Jeff" may not have been born with a baseball uniform, or may not have been a baseball star in his youth, the fact remains that his team is going places.

When one looks back for such a short period of time and vision what has been accomplished under his leadership, is it any wonder that the writer would feel elated over the great success of the home team.

Back in the days of the C. W. A. work program, while "Jeff" was foreman of the excavating project on Wellington avenue, the boys under his supervision requested him to form a baseball team. The team was formed as the C. W. A. baseball nine and won nine straight contests. At this stage it was known by "Jeff" and the players that uniforms were an essential part to bring success to any team.

In talking over this important matter with various fans who love the great national pastime, it was suggested that the Eagle uniforms be used. This plan was accepted and the funds that were necessary to pay the expenses were to be raised through dances or other entertainments conducted by "Jeff" and those interested in the team. Then jealousy entered the picture and a change for the best had to be made.

With his staunch supporters, "Jeff" took over the refreshment concession at the Merchant's annual picnic, and secured the necessary funds to purchase uniforms. The team changed the name to Daly City, and was entered in the San Francisco Winter League.

Expenses were needed for new equipment, baseballs, umpires, etc.; but as the people of our city, owing to the world wide depression, were unable to give support to these dances for the benefit of the ball team, a sponsor had to be found. Many offers were received by Manager Martin, but those of any great interest were from outside the city, and as "Jeff" and his staunch supporters wanted to continue as the home team, these offers were turned down.

Then the suggestion was offered to seek the support of the present sponsor. After much study it was decided that if the city was to be represented by a ball club, it must be one of the very best.

On March 14 the Daly City Tanforan nine played its first game, defeating the strong Boldeman Chocolate club by the score of 5 to 3. The U. S. Marines at Mare Island, Virden Campfires and the Daly City All Stars were defeated in the order named. Then the opening of the Peninsula League on May 5, and the results that Miss Angelina Mozzini of Clara street was the luncheon guest of Mrs. Ted Guidotti of South San Francisco on Wednesday.

NEW FIRE HOUSE IN COLMA DISTRICT

Arrangements having been settled between the City Council and Angelo Benedetti and the lease signed up, Mr. Benedetti lost no time in getting his plans drawn up and letting the contract for the new fire house that is to be Station No. 6 headquarters.

The contractor has rushed things along and the roof is being put on this week.

The members of this company are greatly enthused over the prospect of soon having these quarters turned over to them, as the present quarters are very small and the majority of the members reside nearer to the new location.

Everything has been done by the owner to make the boys feel that at last they will have a first class fire house.

We hope that the project of extending the fire alarm system will be carried, so that this station will be hooked up with the rest of the local department.

DALY CITY GIRL WEDS SAN FRANCISCAN

The bride wore a white satin gown and a small white turban. She carried an arm bouquet of lilies of the valley, gardenias and roses.

Jessie Hart, the bridesmaid, wore a yellow lace dress with a small hat of matching color. She carried a bouquet of orchid and yellow pansies.

The groom was attended by George Vogel. About thirty friends and relatives witnessed the ceremony. A reception for the bride and groom was held at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Mary McLeod of Los Olivos avenue, which was attended by about 100 guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Mills will reside at 152 Santa Barbara avenue.

have been attained by the home team are published in this edition.

Matty Sullivan, pitching ace, has won nine of his ten games for a percentage of 900, and in 23 trips to the plate he has connected for nine hits for an average of 392.

George Kondoff, the catcher, has faced the opposing pitchers 17 times, connecting for seven bingles, an average of 412. Not a bad battery for any manager to possess.

Peter Dinneen, the first sacker, has made 23 trips to the plate and secured eight hits to the tune of 848; "Tudo" Carrasco, the second baseman and field captain has connected eight times in 26 for 308; Johnny Vasquez, the shortstop, in 24 trips to the plate has smashed the pill 11 times for an average of 458; and Bill Kirby, the hotcorner lad six in 26 for 231. An infield as a whole, clipping an average of 336.

Harry Maloney in left field clipping at 375, Joe Albrecht in center at 292, Lola Petrocchi in right at 235, and the grand old man, Sammy Hawley clipping the horse-hide at an 800 gait, gives Manager Martin an outfield that averages 429 in batting.

The team as a whole, in 209 times at bat, have scored 33 runs and hit the pellet 73 times, including two home runs, twelve triples and seven doubles for an average of 349.

Your support should be given the home team on its record alone. Let us all be home town boosters and get results. The fans have been the backbone of the home team. Why don't you become one?

GREAT ACTOR NOW PLAYS DUAL ROLE

Maurice Chevalier has his first dual role as star of "Folies Bergere," 20th Century's lavish picturization of the famous French musical comedy institution, which comes to the Daly City Theater, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, June 16, 17 and 18.

Chevalier plays both Charlier, the gay, straw-hatted, singing star of the Folies Bergere, and the be-moaned, be-mustached French Baron Cassini, noted for his amorous escapades. Thus, the personable French actor is both the hero and the "heavy" of this Darryl F. Zanuck production.

Merle Oberon is seen as the stunning baroness, while Ann Sothern plays the jealous Mimi. Also in the cast are Robert Grieg, Lumsden Hare, Walter Byron, Eric Blore, Ferdinand Gottschalk and Ferdinand Munier.

Maurice Chevalier in "Folies Bergere"

Chevalier sings five songs, supplemented by lavish dance ensembles, staged by Dave Gould in the manner for which the Folies Bergere is world famous.

Roy Del Ruth directed the production from a screen play by Bess Meredyth and Hal Long. "Folies Bergere" is released through United Artists.

Another feature is "McFadden's Flats," with Andy Clyde and Betty Furness.

As an added attraction for Sunday, Monday and Tuesday will be pictures of the fifteen round championship fight between Barney Ross and Jimmy McLarnin.

WEEKLY BULLETIN

By Chief A. P. Chesney

One of the greatest fire hazards which is a constant source of blazes is the accumulation of rubbish and old furniture discarded, but stored away in the basements or attics of the home. If you would ask the owners what they were saving them for they could not tell you, but they are there nevertheless.

A great many of the cities and towns throughout the country have what is designated as clean up week. They are generally held once a year, but I would prefer to see them at least twice a year.

The city manager of one of our neighboring towns was telling me three weeks ago that the street department had picked up forty-two truck loads that had been deposited on the sidewalk on the last clean up, held last month.

At the present time we have no arrangements of this sort in this town, but I hope to take the matter up before long with the city administration.

In the meantime if you have anything of this sort, old mattresses, cots, bed springs, newspapers, magazines or any other kind of rubbish, put them out with your garbage can and if it does cost you a few cents extra, it is much better and cheaper than having a fire.
